

Girls in same-sex relationships are at least 8x more likely to be arrested for statutory rape than their peers*

For every ten boys arrested with rape of a girl they don't have a relationship with,

there are eight boys in a relationship with a girl arrested for statutory rape, forty-three boys in a relationship with a boy arrested for statutory rape, and eighty girls in a relationship with a girl arrested for statutory rape.

*Statutory rape incidents with white people identified as victims were more likely to end in arrest.
The authors' analysis suggests this number could be as high as one hundred fifty-seven.

Suggested Citation:

Irvine, Angela. 2018. Girls in same-sex relationships are at least 8x more likely to be arrested for statutory rape than their male and straight peers. Infographic published by Ceres Policy Research, Oakland, CA.

Data source:

Chaffin, Mark, Chenoweth, Stephanie, and Letourneau, Elizabeth J. 2014. Same-Sex and Race-Based Disparities in Statutory Rape Arrests. Journal of Interpersonal Violence 1-24. DOI: 10.1177/0886260514555132.